PURPOSE

- The intent of this seminar is to show how to file the following two documents with the Nevada Secretary of State.
- A durable power of attorney for health care, in which you name someone you trust to oversee your health care and make medical decisions should you become unable to do so.
- A living will, in which you spell out any wishes about the types of care you do or do not wish to receive if you are unable to speak for yourself. Your doctors and the person you name as your agent in your durable power of attorney for health care must do their best to follow any instructions you leave.

HISTORY

- Your right to direct your own health care is now well established. But that wasn't always the case. Just a few decades ago, heart-wrenching legal battles were fought to win permission to create a document stating that life-prolonging treatments should be terminated -- or continued -- at the end of life.
- Landmark cases involving Karen Ann Quinlan and Nancy Cruzan -- two young women who became brain damaged and unable to communicate their wishes -- opened the way to laws supporting health care documents. Now, every state has a law that permits you to express your health care wishes and requires medical personnel to follow those wishes -- or transfer you to the care of someone else who will do so.

- The Living Will Lockbox is a simple & secure approach to ensure that your medical wishes are followed. Maintained by the Secretary of State's office, a copy of your advance directive will be kept confidentially and readily available to you and your health care provider, when needed, 24-7.

The power to decide is yours. You choose who may have access to your documents filed in the Lockbox. Through the Lockbox, your health care provider may retrieve a copy of your advance directive during an emergency or illness.
